ORIGINAL POETRY.

[various Bards we sung to fame's high,
[sweet strains of candour, soul of praise;
present song shall tell of that which ocean
[ng in more basic, we mean their trifling themes.
[modern "sonnet," "stanzas," "lines" too often
[en the hearts which they were meant to soften.
[y tell of woes,—of pains—of griefs,—of cares,
[swear all the muses wish their prayers!
[exude to cry (and feel no pitying glow,)
[ers so much noise in there can be no woe!
[hand has lost the glance of some fair eye,
[ich dimm'd the beams of Heaven's bright sun on high;
[sighs and groans, deep sorrow rends his breast,
[calls on death to give his bosom rest.
[her, the whose image in his mind did dwell,
[whom his soothing fancy loved to deal,
[the parted Ghost? alas! she has and he,
[were compell'd life but woe and misery.
[ocean grew, and hard to work he goes,
[And gives at length a result of his woes;
[But ere his w[illegible] is read, his passion's cool,
[He thinks he was, indeed, almost a fool.
[He wou'd a tinkling lute, no more we hear
[The plaint which thundering once did taunt our ear;
[That heart which swelling, then did almost break,
[Now, scarce at mood as a quiet lake.

[nother bard has found that without wealth,
[man has Heaven giv'n him wit and health.
[He looks at grandeur with an envious eye,
[He hears heaven with many a sorrowing sigh;
[And every brainless son of gold he sees,
[Tends but to make that bosom less at ease.

[h, I may ne'er be grovelling mammon's prey;
[The worthless god may keep his dross away.
[h, slander! hateful fiend, where'er thou art
[now,—friendship,—honour—all life's charms depart.
[Thy path is strew'd with blood, thy way with mine,
[Thy hellish guile has sadden'd Afric's clime;
[Has brought her children o'er the Atlantic's wave,
[And fetter'd free born man, and call'd him slave!

[No eye can find real cause for pain below,
[Nor need create imaginary woe.
[Cold taints the soul, yet while it seems to bless,
[as often brings but sorrow and distress.

[Yet may not suffering injur'd worth complain?
[es, and we'll ever listen to its strain;
[Our heart can find for sorrow, with as warm
[A thrill, as heart that beats in human form,
[Not for each grief in most of parts tell,
With indignation only does it swell. MOSES.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

It was the sound of Paine's dull chariot-wheel,
Coming like distant thunder, on mine ear;
And on my sight he flashed, a gloomy form,
Flashed with the clouds, and traversing the storm.
He had a flaming hammer o'er his head,
Like a carpet-light leading from the ghastly dead,
Which sustained his gray coursers, and revealed
That which forever from the world is sealed:
It was the picture of the last great day.
When earth shall impiously pass away,
And suns shall light the long preparing pyre,
And God survey a wilderness of fire.
Myriads of souls were rushing, crowding there;
But not a word of horror or despair,
The eye, the face, the awful story gave,
Though glassed and mouldering from the recent grave.
It was as dead men held a stern divan,—
And watched the ruin which the Lord began.

The earth did not go round: some unknown force
Had stopped it quick on its revolving course;
And straight towards its gravitating goal,
It plunged and darted on reverted pole.
The staggering sun, like some wild spectre, grew
Of greater bulk and far intenser hue:
The seas, regorgitating, left their bar,
Dissolved the land, and vanished into air:
Dense vapours, like the fabled worlds of things,
Rose as if borne upon the Eternal's wings,
And caught the reddest blushes of the sun,
Like demons shunning the some horror done.
And then the picture vanished from mine eye;
But sung, terrorising, Nature's funeral cry,
The jarring crash—the finishing curse—
And all was hushed upon my quivering ear. M.

THE TRIUMPH OF LOVE.

Reclining on a mossy bed,
With starry canopy o'erspread,
On nature's bosom press'd;
One eve, I lay, with soul subdued,
And "nature's sweet restorer" wooed,
To soothe my soul to rest.

The white Goddess gently laid
Oblivion's mantle o'er my head,
And lulled me in repose;
On roving pinions Fancy flew,
And smiling to my wondering view,
A stately palace rose!

Soft music spread her voice around,
And echo, to the thrilling sound,
Responsive, soft replies;
The brazen portal open flew,
A joyful group appeared to view,
Of Cupid's votaries.

Exalted on his throne, above
The dazzling train, the God of love,
His golden sceptre swayed;
The Graces, hand in hand, advance,
And lightly tripping through the dance,
Their airy gambols played.

With sudden crash the palace falls,
And as its wreck, its mouldering walls
A yawning cavern rear'd:
With terror seized, the Graces fled,
In wild affright, and in their stead,
A motley troop appeared.

Exulting with malignant joy,
With horrid shouts, the trembling boy
The yelling fiends surround;
And Av'rice, Poverty and Pride,
With fell intent, their force allied
To drag him to the ground.

At their approach the roses fade,
The withered leaves fall from his head,
The thorns alone remained;
But, yet disdaining to retreat,
The golden winged God, his seat
Unyielding, still retained.

Next, Jealousy, the "green eyed fiend,"
With deadly hate his visage gleamed,
His eye with fury shone;
Darting at love with might and main,
The monster strove but strove in vain
To force him from his throne.

Piercing with yells the wounded air,
With headlong fury rushed Despair,
Love trembled at the blow;
With feeble voice for succour calls,
Exhausted, yet resisting falls
Beneath his deadly foe.

His cry was heard for to his aid,
A band of warriors soon arrayed,
And Hymen led the way:
He waved his torch above his head,
Dismayed, the baffled Demons fled,
And Love resumed his sway.

The gloomy horrors fled from view,
The joyous train, their sports renew,
Inspired with Hope and Joy;
With ready hands a wreath entwine,
The Laurel and the Rose combine,
To crown the godlike boy. D.

COMMUNICATION.

FROM MARTIN ROCHE, Mathematical Teacher at No. 231 South Fifth street, Philadelphia, between Lombard and Gaskill streets.

To the Editors of the Saturday Evening Post.

GENTLEMEN.—Having seen a wish expressed, in your number of the 27th ult. to be informed as to the distance a man would have to traverse "to unwind from a stake, eleven inches in circumference, a line of one hundred yards, (keeping at its extremity)" and there having appeared no explanation since, to gratify your curiosity, I beg leave to offer the following, wherein the stake is considered perpendicular to the horizontal plane on which the man moves, and the line (without thickness, as no thickness has been assigned) wound round the bottom of it.

SOLUTION.

The diameter of the stake is 3.5014 inches, and 100 yards are 3600 inches, hence per Simpson's Fluxions, article 139, we have $\frac{3600}{3.5014} = 3701376$ inches, = 58 miles, 3 furlongs, 15 perches, and 4½ yards, statute measure, the whole distance sought.

OTHERWISE,

The above solution may be derived, in another way, from the same source: and this way will be much more satisfactory to any man not acquainted with fluxions. It is this:

$\frac{3600}{11} = 327\frac{3}{11}$, the number of times the line coils round the stake—and $\frac{3}{9.18712} = 34.5576$ inches, the distance moved by the man, in unwinding the first coil; and this 34.5576 is the circumference of the circle, whose diameter is 11 inches.

The next round he goes will be 11 inches outside this every where; whence it will be the circumference of a circle whose diameter is 3 × 11 inches. The next will be that whose diameter is 5 × 11 inches, &c. Whence the circumferences, being as their diameters, will be expressed by the arithmetical progression $1 + 3 + 5 + 7 \ldots$ up to $327\frac{3}{11}$ terms; whose sum total is 107107.44 circumferences each, equal to 34.5576 inches: wherefore, 107107.44 × 34.5576 = 3701376 inches, the whole distance required as before.

A QUESTION PROPOSED.

As we are, Messrs. Editors, on the subject of discussion, perhaps some gentleman among your numerous readers may take pleasure in explaining to us, scientifically, whether nought, divided by nought, produces nought or unity for a quotient. We can easily see that 0 multiplied by 1 produces 0; that 1 multiplied by 0 produces 0; that 0 divided by 1 produces 0; and that 1 divided by 0 produces infinity. But we want to see what will be the quotient of 0 divided by 0.

Bonnycastle and Euler assert in their treatises on Algebra, that it produces something: but they do not tell us what that something is. But, however great our respect for those gentlemen as mathematicians, we do not consider their assertion as carrying with it the conviction of a demonstration, especially in a matter of great importance, as this is. The semblance of proof which they give, is not by any means conclusive.

24th Dec. 1824.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

The present is an age, which may be emphatically called an age of improvement. Possessing, as we do, the assistance of all former generations, together with the progressive state of human intellect, we look back upon the inventions of our forefathers, as being, in many respects, rude and imperfect. Hence, every year ushers into existence some new piece of mechanism, calculated to facilitate and diminish human labour, and thus contribute to the comfort and convenience of man. But, whilst the mechanic arts are thus rapidly advancing towards a state of perfection, and receive the fostering care of statesmen and legislators, it is to be lamented, that almost every effort of intellect, to advance the progress of science and knowledge, is branded by the votaries of former systems with the opprobrious epithet of innovation.

Perhaps, to no branch of useful science, can the above remarks be applied, with greater propriety, than to that of English Grammar. From the first introduction of letters, till the present period, language has been a subject of criticism and investigation: and no doubt it will continue to receive the attention of the erudite and refined, until language and tongues shall cease to exist. The existence of so many treatises on the subject of Grammar, proves to a demonstration, that many are convinced of the imperfections of previous works. But while all aim at improvement, they seem to build their structures upon the same basis, and consequently, in many respects, obscure their subject by words, without knowledge. Hence, while one says I am of Paul, and another I am of Apollos, the inquirer after truth becomes enveloped in a labyrinth of doubt and uncertainty. The highest attainment that can be secured by the present systems, amounts to nothing more than a "perhaps," "it may be so," or, "it can be so," on many important points respecting the true import of terms, or the philosophical construction of sentences. One unavoidable consequence of this confusion and uncertainty, is, that we have almost as many methods of parsing certain words and phrases, as there are systems of Grammar, or living instructors.

The above premises being correct, I am prepared to introduce to the notice of youth, whose judgments are matured, a System, which, for its superiority and beauty, is worthy of the immediate attention of all those who aspire to correctness of speaking and writing the English language. The public are well acquainted with the pretensions of Mr Grout, whose system of Grammar, although unknown to many, has been made the subject of scoff and ridicule. Such opposition, from persons entirely unacquainted with Mr. G.'s system, is an act of injustice to the talents and ingenuity of that gentleman, as gross and unmerited as it is illiberal and unbecoming on the part of its authors.

The question at issue should not be, "is his system old or new? Does he pursue the same beaten track with those who have gone before him, as it respects classification and arrangement of words?" But utility and perspicuity should be the criterion, by which to approve or condemn. From an acquaintance with both systems, the writer is prepared to say, that the advantages to be derived from the system under consideration, are greater than those attainable by any system extant. The comprehensive and definite construction of the system, the classification of words according to their true import, and the lucid and appropriate nature of his illustrations, are calculated to convey to the mind of the pupil a more definite and philosophical knowledge of Grammar, in a short space of time, than can be acquired by the systems in general use.

I conclude, by expressing an ardent desire, that the life and health of Mr. Grout may be preserved, until the public shall be favoured with an edition of his System. W. D.

Master Hubard's Exhibition of Cuttings.

To mark the early development, and the progress of genius, is an occupation peculiarly gratifying to the liberal mind, and the display of ordinary talent at an early age, not only affords amusement to those who merely seek the gratification of curiosity, but has roused the speculation of men of science and learning. Amidst the juvenile prodigies of the present day, we have Miss Clara Fisher, eminent in the histrionic art, Master Aspul as a musician, and Master Hubard, whose powers of graphic delineation, with materials apparently the most dead and inexpressive, have excited the astonishment of all who have beheld his productions. The ease and rapidity with which he cuts the most intricate figures, in paper, with common scissors, and without the aid of previous drawing, as the result of a talent peculiarly his own, and bespeaks a delicacy and quickness of vision, and a steadiness of nerve, which, if cultivated to the attainment of the higher qualifications of the painter, would probably enable him to reach a distinguished eminence in the art. He appears to produce with equal facility and despatch, figures of men and animals, in every variety of graceful attitude, trees, landscapes, fancy pieces, and correct likenesses of the different individuals who honor him with a visit. The last is the work of a few moments; and where the figure or feature to be represented are not altogether deficient in that prominence or expression, which can alone impart spirit to a profile, he seldom fails in producing likenesses so perfect and striking, that they fully illustrate the fact, that fidelity of outline constitutes more of the merit of a picture than painters generally suppose. Master Hubard traces his features exactly as they appear. If a lady's stray curl intersects the line of her forehead, or the fold of a garment breaks the outline of the back, he, with the most scrupulous fidelity, delineates both, and we verily believe, such is his careless composure, that were a fly to settle on a gentleman's nose whilst he sat for his likeness, it would be as rigidly outlined as any part of the miniature.—The young and handsome have nothing to complain of in all this, but we cannot help thinking it somewhat uncourteous in the young artist so sternly to exhibit to those to whom nature has been less bountiful, every little imperfection without extenuation; and we think he might, without any reduction of his popularity, take a little paring from noses of unmannerly length, and add it to those which "in longitude are sorely scanty." Be this as it may, his productions have, since he first visited Liverpool, met with the warmest approbation in the northern metropolis and in Glasgow, where he was honored with the patronage and support of the most distinguished literary and scientific men, and as he has, with a blooming industry, made many valuable additions to his collection, and has established his fame in an art in which he has no competitors, we shall supply a brief notice of his birth, and conclude with drawing public attention to several of the most striking of his performances.

Our young artist was born at Whitechurch, in the county of Shropshire, of respectable but not opulent parents, and he is now about fourteen years of age. His talents were first discovered at a very early age, and in a manner which reminds us of the dawning of genius in the late highly distinguished President of the Royal Academy, Mr. West. The latter, while only in his seventh year, was one day left to watch the infant child of one of his sisters while it was asleep, and, struck with its beauty and innocence, he seized a pen which was at hand, and with red and black ink attempted to delineate a portrait. On the entrance of his mother into the apartment, he endeavored to conceal it, but the old lady prevailed upon him to show it; and, looking at the drawing, found, with infinite delight, that he had made "a likeness of little Sally," and thus encouraged, he went on till he became eminent as a painter. Little Hubard, when about the same age, had been with his parents to the village church, and was observed to be remarkably demure and attentive. Shortly, however, after his return home, they were surprised to find him cutting figures from a sheet of paper—correct likeness of their minister, (whom, it seems, he had been taking off,) his pulpit and his presentor. His talent thus forcibly developed was encouraged, and he soon reached that degree of perfection which continues to render him every day an object of increasing curiosity and admiration. Master Hubard's gallery abounds with spirited likenesses of many distinguished living characters, most of them full lengths—and all of them acknowledged likenesses. In the delineation of the eccentric characters in humble life in the towns through which he has passed, he has been particularly successful; and the grouping of them, and other figures in frames, is ingenious and appropriate. Some of the figures are relieved by being bronzed, but many of them are full of expression without the aid of a pencil. A clump of trees amongst other pieces, cut from gold paper, is beautiful, and on examining the minute and multitudinous branches with their thousand varied inflexions—one is astonished that so elaborate a piece could be produced with a pair of scissors. Our limits do not permit us to notice the numerous figures as we should wish, most of which (for there are exceptions) whether representing animate or inanimate nature, are extremely well executed, but we cannot conclude without directing the attention of visitors to those pieces which exhibit a novel application of Master Hubard's art—to the production of a species of light and shade. This effect is produced by minute lines, cut out in the black paper, which form the profile, or shape of the object, and as these lines become white, when the paper is placed on a white ground—they produce a relief and perspective, of a peculiarly expressive and curious character. In this manner Master Hubard has completed three large views—one of the High-street, Oxford—one of the Westminster Abbey—and another of the new Catholic Chapel, in Glasgow. But we must, for the present, take leave of this young artist.

CULTIVATION OF COFFEE.

The coffee tree has only a single stem, which rises perpendicularly, and is well filled with branches from within a foot of the ground upwards. In order that the fruit may be gathered with facility, the tree is not suffered to grow more than five feet and a half high. Its general form is conical.

A coffee-field is laid out with great attention to order and beauty. A piece of level ground is chosen, which usually has a red soil, and is generally free from stones. A square or parallelogram is then marked out, containing from 100 to 540 acres, to be enclosed in a hedge of limes, pines, or some other suitable material.—The lime hedge is very beautiful, being from four to six feet thick, and having its top, by frequent trimming, a perfect level. The pine is not so beautiful; but it takes less room, requires less attention, makes a good fence, and is more durable.

Having defined the boundaries of the estate, the principal avenues through it are next laid out; and they are generally two, three, or four rods wide, straight, and intersecting each other at right angles. In the finished estates, these are usually ornamented and shaded on each side, by rows of the orange, citron, mango, almond, avocado, and palm trees, &c. At the termination of one of these, and situated perhaps on elevated ground, is the house of the planter.—Small avenues are next made, parallel with the others. All these avenues are preserved free from weeds, and are kept smooth and neat.

Thus the whole ground is thrown into squares, which are to be filled with coffee plants. These, having previously grown to the height of one or two feet, from seeds sown under the shade of some grove, are carefully transplanted, and are arranged in rows parallel with the avenues, and nearly six feet apart. A square contains 10, 20, or 30,000 trees. By the third year from this time, they begin to remunerate the planter; and at the end of six or seven years, may be regarded as mature. When a tree dies, a new one takes its place; but the original plantation is expected to live 15 years. Among the coffee, especially when it is new, the plantation is suffered to grow, for the purpose of giving bread to the negroes. Here and there, also, the orange and citron trees lift their golden fruit above the surface; and far above all the rest, the privileged palm, in every direction, waves its beautiful summit.

Such plantations are great, splendid gardens, and are justly regarded by the inhabitants as the glory of their island.

The plantations that are finished, contain from 100,000 to 400,000 trees in each, and are wrought by from 40 to 400 negroes; and in proportion to the gross income, the expence in conducting them is said to be considerably less than that of the sugar estates. Hence their number is more rapidly augmenting.

The trees generally blossom in February, and in the early part of May, and sometimes oftener; but the blossom, on which most dependence is placed, is the one in May. Then a vast level surface, white as the drifted snow, is presented to the beholder; but varied and enlivened by the taller trees just mentioned. The harvest commences in September, and ends in February or March. If within this time the average of half a pound of coffee is gathered from each tree, the harvest is esteemed good.

When the berries acquire a dark red colour, they are considered ripe for gathering, and the negroes, properly equipped, are sent into the field. An industrious negro will gather five bushels in a day; and a bushel in the pulp, fresh from the tree, is expected to yield at least ten pounds of good coffee. It is then spread upon extensive dryers made of stone mortar. This process requires nearly a month. The husk, or shell, is then separated from the seed, in a mill, which exactly resembles the mills in this country, where apples are ground in a circular trough, by a huge rolling stone—excepting that the roller for the coffee is wood, though of considerable weight. In a few cases, a machine of a very different construction is used; but it needs not be described.

The pulp being removed, the whole is exposed to the action of a fan, and then of a sieve, after which the female slaves carefully pick out the defective kernels. From 12 to 15 hundred pounds may thus be cleaned in a day. In the opinion of the planters, the flavour of coffee is materially improved by age. That which is four or five years old is preferred.

The Kangaroo, is as great a curiosity as any to be found in the pages of natural history. His body is shaped like a sugar loaf, with a head somewhat resembling that of a wolf. His hinder legs are twenty-eight inches in length, and extremely vigorous; his fore legs only eight. He sits in an erect position like a dog in the attitude of begging for his meals. If we attach to this singular animal a long tail, we shall have the figure of the Kangaroo. When attacked, he throws himself on his back, with his long legs gathered in front, grasps his enemy with his fore feet, and with his hinder, rips the entrails from the body! Incapable of walking, he moves in an erect position, with long and vigorous bounds towards his object, somewhat resembling those of a grass-hopper. But the writer of the Field Sports, presents us, below, with a new feature in the character of this singular animal. When assailed by the hounds, it seems that he sometimes retreats to the watery element, and standing erect, with his head and fore feet above his fortification, awaits the attack of his enemy. As the dog is compelled to swim, before he can come within his reach, this murderous ruffian grasps his antagonist with his fore paws, and sinking a little, with his own head above the water, drowns him without any mercy.

FIELD SPORTS OF NEW S. WALES.

The country abounds in game. All the opossum tribe are night animals, and the settlers hunt them in the moonlight evenings, when they come out to feed. The dogs chase them until they run up a tree, at the foot of which they stand and bark, when the hunter either knocks them down with sticks, shoots them, or cuts down the tree. You may in this way, often in a few hours of a fine evening, kill a dozen handicoots, opossums, squirrels, and native cats, if the country around has not been much hunted. You usually hunt the kangaroo with cross bred greyhounds, which are named 'kangaroo dogs.' The best time is the morning early, before they retire from feeding, and when once you lay the dogs on, you must follow at a full gallop, in order to keep sight, and secure the carcase. The large kangaroos are dangerous to attack, from their hugging the dogs like a bear, and tearing their bowels out with their hind claws. They will gut a dog with these as clean as if done with a knife, from the sharpness of the claw, and great power they have in their hind legs. Wounds from these and the emus are so common as to be nothing thought of, the old hunters usually carrying a needle and thread to sew them up. The old kangaroos will often hop off with a half a dozen dogs hanging about them; and I was told of one at Van Diemen's Land, which carried a man belonging to Mr. Cunning, for a considerable distance, and was nearly tumbling him over a precipice. The cunning old dogs usually select a small kangaroo out of a flock, knowing the large ones are so difficult to kill. The kangaroos bound along at the offset with amazing rapidity; they almost appear to fly from the immense springs they take, and in leaping make no other use of their tail than merely as a balance, bounding off their hind legs only. The dogs usually seize them by the throat; but if a single dog runs down a large kangaroo, the latter will often turn round and give battle, when, if the dog is afraid to engage, he runs barking round his victim till others come to his assistance. When a kangaroo is hard pressed, it always makes for a pool of water, where, by reason of its long legs it can stand firmly upright, while the dogs are obliged to swim. A battle in the water between dogs and a large kangaroo, is a most amusing spectacle. The kangaroo suddenly pounces his fore paws upon the first dog, shoves him under water with the greatest adroitness, and holds him there until drowned, unless others arrive to his rescue, when he releases his half-drowned adversary who makes for the shore in great haste, and endeavours to dispose of his other antagonists in the same way. I have seen a kangaroo fire out six dogs in this manner, and, if the hunter is not at hand, it is ten to one but he will drown several.

COLLECTANEA.

Discovery.—We are informed that Dr. O'Neil, of Gomber, has discovered a chemical process by which hog's-lard can be converted into an article for clipping and moulding candles, superior to Russian tallow, without any additional expence.—When prepared according to his plan, it is equal to white wax or spermaceti. The candles made of it burn with a superior light, resembling in flame the purest gas. They are altogether void of the offensive smell and greasy touch of other candles, and, when burning in the closest apartment, have no smell, and emit no smoke. They burn by many minutes longer than any other candle of the same weight, and with a change of process only in preparing, they can be either of a beautiful golden yellow, or of a snow-white color, which the effects of light or time cannot alter.

Sayings of Eddin Sadi.—If the king take an apple from the garden of a subject, his servants will soon cut down the tree. Learn virtue from the vicious: and what offends you in their conduct, avoid in your own. A gentle hand will lead the elephant itself by a hair. A wise man will not contend with a fool.—If you resist temptation, do not assure yourself that you shall escape slander.—A wise man who is apt at the same time virtuous, is a blind man carrying a lamp, he gives light to others, whilst he himself remains in darkness.

Female Society.—Nothing is better adapted to give the last polish to the education of a young man than the conversation of virtuous and accomplished women.—Their society serves to smooth the rough edges of our character, and to mellow our tempers. In short, the man who has never been acquainted with females of the better class is not only deprived of many of the purest pleasures, but also will have little success in social life; and I should not like to be connected by the bonds of friendship with the man who has a bad opinion and speaks ill of the female sex in general.

LOGIC.—A curious decision in the early part of Elizabeth's reign, is reported by Plowden, which we here notice, because it has been supposed to be the object of the ridicule of Shakspeare in the reasoning of the grave digger in Hamlet, upon the drowning of Ophelia.

Sir James Hales, a Judge of the Common Pleas, and his wife, were joint-tenants of a term for years. Sir James committed suicide, by drowning. On the argument that the term forfeited to the king by the felony, and not to his wife, Chief Justice Dyer said: "The felony is attributed to the act, which act is always done by a living man, and in his life-time, as Brown, [one of the presiding Justices] said, for he said, Sir James Hales was dead: and how came he to his death? It may be answered, by drowning. And who drowned him? Sir James Hales. And when did he drown him? In his life-time. So that Sir James Hales being alive, caused Sir James Hales to die; and the act of the living man was the death of the dead man. And then for this offence it is reasonable to punish the living man who committed the offence, and not the dead man. But how can he be said to be punished alive, when the punishment comes after his death? Sir, this can be done no other way, but by divesting out of him, from the time of the act done in his life, which was the cause of his death, the title and property of those things which he had in his life-time."

FROM THE BEREAN.

I observe in the "Circular," a Trinitarian paper published in Wilmington, some "Remarks on a Letter from Elias Hicks to Dr. N. Shoemaker," by a writer over the signature of Theophilus. We are by no means surprised at the illiberal sentiments of this writer; the character of the paper to which they appear is a sufficient apology for his "Remarks." It was originally a plant of a narrow sectarian character, and, as might have been expected, has been remarkable for its uncharitable fruits.

He begins by telling his readers that he is "authorized to conclude that this most dangerous, because most popular man, holds unworthy and degrading views of the holy Scriptures—denies the fall of man—the divinity of Christ—the reality of his propitiation for the sins of the world—and propagates other doctrines, subversive of the very foundation of Christianity—in other words, he is an Unitarian."

Now what are we to think of the character of this writer, who at the very time he would make us believe that he was concerned for the interests of that religion which teaches "not to bear false witness against a neighbor," has, in one short paragraph, made five charges against Elias Hick, not one of which is true!

It is not my intention to enter into a discussion of these charges—to fill the columns of the Berean with a controversy which is now in abler hands—but in a brief manner to shew that the difference which subsists between E. Hicks and those who oppose him, does not arise from any disregard on his part to the doctrines of the old and new Testaments—and from any disbelief of their authenticity, but from a different mode of understanding them.

The ground then of this difference is precisely the same on which all the sects in Christendom differ from each other. They all claim Scripture authority for their respective doctrines and opinions: so does Elias Hicks! They all take the liberty to put their own constructions on the text: So does Elias Hicks! They all suppose they have discovered the genuine meaning of the Scripture writers: So does Elias Hicks!—What ground then, has this writer for charging Elias Hicks with holding "unworthy and degrading views of the holy Scriptures?" Not any better than Elias Hicks has for charging him and his Trinitarian brethren, with holding degrading views of the same writings!—irrational notions of the Divine nature!

That Elias Hicks "denies the fall of man," is a bare unsupported assertion, and wholly untrue.—He admits that Adam and Eve by disobedience fell from their holy, innocent, paradisical state—and he also admits that every son and daughter of the primogenitors of mankind, who disobey the commands of a holy God, fall in the same way.—He admits that "in Adam all die;" that is in sin or disobedience, every transgressor falls, as Adam did, from the favour of God into the death of sin; from which he cannot recover himself, but must be, and is, wholly indebted for restoration to "the Second Adam, the Lord from heaven, the quickening Spirit"—in other words to CHRIST, who is "God manifest in the flesh,"—"to the only wise God our Saviour."

That "he denies the divinity of Christ," is equally untrue. No man more fully acknowledges it. He not only admits that Christ did come in the flesh, and in that manifestation performed those "mighty works" recorded of him; but that "Christ is come in the flesh"—according to that excellent testimony, 1 John, iv. 2. "Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God"—and according to the testimony of the Apostle Paul, that Christ is "the Wisdom of God, and the power of God," is "God manifest in the flesh."

Now no plainer confession to the divinity of Christ can possibly be made, than this is. If Christ is "God manifest in the flesh," then is Christ God—and, if God is divine, which the opposers of Elias Hicks will not I presume deny, then CHRIST is divine—and then, here is a full and unequivocal acknowledgment to the divinity of Christ.

And this is plain Scripture doctrine—easily understood; stript indeed of the absurdities and mysteries of the Athanasian scheme, but sanctioned by the experience of every true Christian. "That which may be known of God," said the Apostle, "is manifest in man, for God hath shewed it unto him"—and that which is not known of God, by his own manifestation in the soul, is no knowledge of God—it is a mere opinion or notion of him, derived from books or men—and is of no value to its possessor—no more than a notion of light is to the man born blind!

The next charge against Elias Hicks, is that "he denies the reality of Christ's propitiation for the sins of the world!" A charge without the least foundation, and most obviously false. Nothing can more exactly express the views of Elias Hicks, on the nature of Christ's propitiatory office, than the text of the apostle. "And he [Christ] is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." But here lies the difference between Elias Hicks and his opponents: The latter contend that the propitiation has been effected by what Christ did, during his appearance in the flesh, near two thousand years ago! The former contends, in the language of the apostle, that "he is the propitiation"—that he is now the propitiation—that at this very moment, Christ, in every obedient and faithful soul, is doing his propitiatory work—is reconciling us to God—destroying the enmity—and, by his sanctifying power, bringing us into union with the divine nature.

And this also is plain Scripture doctrine. It is found true in the experience of every living member of Christ. We need not run to books, for a proof of it—it needs no learned comment to illustrate it—it requires no priest to explain it!—and indeed this is one of the greatest objections to it. It is too simple to please the metaphysical taste of the theologian—it is too practical to meet the approbation of the theorist—and finally, it is too mortifying to corrupted human nature to be embraced by those who hate the cross of Christ.

The last charge against Elias Hicks in the passage I have quoted, is of a general nature. It is that "he propagates other doctrines subversive of the very foundation of Christianity." It is easy to make general charges. The present one is bare assertion—mere ipse dixits and merits no other reply, than a bare denial. It is false.

But what is "the foundation of Christianity!"—Is it the Athanasian creed? Is it Trithcism? Is it the doctrine of three persons in one God? By our author's dislike of Unitarianism, we may fairly presume he does not relish the doctrine of an undivided Deity. His God is compounded—made up of three persons! One of them becomes offended, another tries to appease him, and offers to die for this purpose. Now this scheme involves absurdities! It supposes that God is a being like ourselves changeable in his nature—at one time wrathful—at another merciful:—whereas, in plain Scripture language, "he is God, and changeth not"—the "same to-day, yesterday, and forever."—"God is love"—"God is light, and in him is no darkness at all"—one changeless fountain of Love and Light. The darkness is in us—the wrath is in us—the wrath is in man; and this darkness and this wrath must be removed from the soul, by the introduction of Light and love—and this is the great purpose of Christ's coming—"I am come that they might have life." "He that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God and God in him." In this happy state, we come to know the Gospel propitiation—the real Christian atonement—the cleansing blood of Christ:—For "if ye walk in the light, as God is in the light, ye have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son, cleanseth you from all sin."

Our author, after making five false charges against Elias Hicks, comes to the following conclusion: "He is an Unitarian."

An UNITARIAN, in the most extensive sense of the term, is any one who believes in one God—one eternal, holy, infinite spirit—one undivided, uncompounded Deity! Oh! what a dangerous belief is this! How "subversive of the very foundation of Christianity!" (The author ought to have said of TRINITARIANISM!)—"Christians ought to abhor this doctrine"—"When a Church craves to contend earnestly for TRINITARIANISM, which was the "faith once delivered to the saints"—when Christians bid a man "God speed," who does not bring with him the doctrine of three Gods—when a man preaches any other Gospel than that of Athanasius—he must be corrupt indeed!!!

"We are glad therefore," says Theophilus, "to see the testimony of Anna Braithwaite, Ann Shipley and Joseph Whitall, against such awful corruptions and misrepresentations of the truth." In other words, "We are glad therefore to see Anna Braithwaite, Ann Shipley and Joseph Whitall, receding from genuine Quakerism, and approaching the reformed churches"—we are glad to see them embracing the Trinitarian scheme!!! FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Messrs. Printers—I noticed in your paper of last Saturday, a piece signed "J. Grout," criticising on Mr. Brown's Grammar, &c. So far as Mr. Brown is concerned, I shall say nothing, not being acquainted with the Grammar of which he speaks—every attempt, however, to improve the language, or facilitate the learner, by improving the mode of its instruction, is certainly laudable in itself; but if in this, errors are committed, it is but a justice due to the public that they should be pointed out.

I agree with Mr. G. that either will distribute one of two thousand, indifferently, as well as of two individuals; though I am aware that this is contrary to what is laid down in books; but books should never prevail over common sense.

But what harm could possibly arise, if this word should be invariably written ēhur? It would fix the pronunciation, and prevent it being pronounced ihur, giving the i the same sound they have in height, as it is sometimes pronounced; at the same time its meaning would be as well understood.

What have the common people to do with Etymology? They know nothing about it; neither can it be of any possible use to them. It is enough for them to know the meaning of words, and how they should be pronounced; and this they always learn first in their own language, without tracing it to any foreign derivation. Not more than one out of ten, therefore, have any use for etymology, and ninety-nine out of every hundred would do very well without it. Why, then, should we burden the memories of the whole community with that which can be of no use to any except the philologist? Let the grammarian learn, that ēhur in the new orthography is the same as either in the old, (and so with every other word, which will be putting no greater burden upon him than what is now put upon every one,) and then he will have all the benefits of Etymology that any one can now enjoy. A. KNEELAND.

The American squadron in the Mediterranean is to consist of the ship of the line North Carolina, frigate Constitution, corvette Cyane, the sloops of war Erie and Ontario, and schooner Nonsuch; and will be under the command of Commodore Rogers, who has been for several years past the president of the board of navy commissioners.

EUROPEAN AFFAIRS.

The packet ship Cadmus, Capt. Allyn, which vessel brought out Gen. La Fayette, has returned from another visit to Havre. Capt. A. visited the family of the General at La Grange, a short time previous to his sailing, and found them all well.

The Journal des Debats remarks, that Turkey has never encountered similar disasters—surprisings things will be published in a few days.

Mr. Fauntleroy, the banker, who had been detected in forging to a large amount, has been tried at the Old Bailey, and sentenced to be executed.

We understand, says Galignani's Messenger, the cause of the Dutchess of Berry being absent from St. Denis on the day of the late King's interment, is a point of etiquette, according to which Princesses never enter the place where their consorts are buried.

The Dublin Star says, that a seat in Parliament is to be procured for Mr. Cobbett, as the advocate of emancipation, the expense to be paid out of the Catholic rent.

It is the intention of the Catholic Association to have their general petition ready to be presented by Sir Francis Burdett, on the opening day of Parliament, and to pour in three or four petitions every week during the session.

All the letters from Spain contain afflicting news—they speak of nothing but arrests, condemnations and executions. Fifteen superior officers of the constitutional army, who had capitulated, were in a chapel at Corunna, awaiting the hour of punishment. General Contreras, ex general of Galicia, who had distinguished himself very much by his spirit of moderation, had been arrested. He is said to be implicated in the war of Cruz.

The authorities of Bilboa have done giving passports, otherwise emigration would have left the city quite deserted. The commerce of Saint Andero has been quite destroyed, by the numerous captures made by the Colombian privateers about Cuba.

From the shores of the Danube, October 21.—The latest news from the Archipelago, furnishes reason to believe, that the cause of Greece is secure. It is asserted, that a great power has declared in their favour, and that important events will take place next spring.

The Paris Constitutionnel says, the interior situation of France presents a singular phenomenon—a nation, fatigued with civil discords, rallying around the throne as a point of juncture for all interests, and a ministry terrified at this union, betraying its regrets at an event which diffuses joy among all good citizens.

The publishers of the novels and tales of the Great Known Unknown of the North, had their periodical private sale of books, at the Albion Tavern, on Friday, the 22d of October, when Tales of the Crusaders, by the author of Waverly and Ivanhoe, were offered to the trade, and about 3800 copies were purchased by the booksellers in London only. The work was to be published in November.

A German Explanation of the Deluge—M. Chabrier, a corresponding member of the Society of the Friends of Nature at Frankfort, has published a memoir to prove that the deluge was occasioned by the fall of the seas of another planet upon ours; and that the terrestrial matter of that broke-up-world, falling on our globe, formed our mountains, &c.

In answer to the objection that Moses has not alluded to this explanation of the formation of our mountains, he supposes that "the patriarch King was shut up in the ark with his family, where, as may be well imagined, he had work enough on his hands, and was so fully employed, that he had no time to observe this important event, and the weather was so terrible that he could not learn what was passing out of doors."

GREENLAND.—In the last volume of the Transactions of the Royal Society of Sciences at Copenhagen, is a paper founded on the researches of some travellers who had recently visited Greenland, which corrects an error hitherto entertained by several learned natural philosophers, namely, that Greenland possesses only twenty-four kinds of plants perfectly organized. It is now well established, that there are above two hundred kinds of plants in that country.

CAIRO, August 15.—The plague begins to lose its malignity—nineteen thousand persons have died of it between the commencement of March and the 13th of June, among them were many Franks. The Pacha has been all the time at Alexandria, in quarantine, and the principal persons of the city followed his example. The Turks begin to forget their fatalism, and take precautions against the disease.

Earthquake.—Recent accounts from Europe state that a severe earthquake has been experienced at Jerusalem, which has shaken down the celebrated Mosque of Omar, and reduced to ruins the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. A great part of the city is reported to have been destroyed, but nothing is said with respect to the lives of the inhabitants.

The latest London papers state, that Henry Fauntleroy, the London banker, has received the sentence of death for his crimes. It may be well, therefore, briefly to recapitulate his history as a culprit. From the testimony, it appeared to be confirmed, that his whole life had been one scene of extravagance and of gambling, and that he was one of those men whom Providence has cursed with strong nerves and contempt of public opinion. He maintained three establishments; one of which for his wife, with whom he never lived. Having been compelled to marry her by her relatives, he left her the moment they departed from the church. Another of his establishments was called his mansion, and a third an establishment for another lady. The banking house of March & Co. of which he was a partner, became bankrupts in consequence of his conduct, and several meetings of the commissioners on their affairs had been held, and the examination developed new items of extravagance. He was confined in the house of correction, and on the 21 of October had his second examination before justice Conant, when ample evidence of other very extensive forgeries was produced, and his guilt and fate appeared certain. At his examination he observed a strict silence; and never altered the position he first took at the table during the whole of it. His countenance indicated a total indifference to the whole proceeding. The forgery of the power of attorney by which he was enabled to sell 46,000 pounds at three per cents, the property of the widow and children of W. Ballie, was first proved. He was enabled to commit these forgeries by having been entrusted with Goodchild & Hume, as one of the trustees of the stocks, and authorised to receive the dividends which he was very punctual in paying. His own name was signed and properly witnessed; but the names of the other two and the owners of the stock were forged, as also the attestation of the witnesses to their signature. Another forgery proved was for 17,000 pounds of 3 per cents, and two others for 5,000 pounds each, 3 per cents, were the property of Misses Frances and Eliza W. Young, sisters of the lady to whom he was married, and refused to live with. The young ladies in giving their testimony were deeply affected. Evidence of his taking the forged powers of attorney to the transfer office was also adduced. He was then reconducted to the house of correction, where he was to continue constantly watched by two officers, till a week before the ensuing Old Bailey sessions, when he was to be committed to Newgate for trial. His counsel was to be allowed free access to him. The keeper of the house of correction remarked, that the prisoner appeared to be wonderfully at ease, to eat and sleep well, and that his spirits were not at any time depressed. Many of the persons injured by him had expressed a reluctance to prosecute him; but the Bank of England had published a determination not to be responsible to any person who held back from the prosecution. The fate of this luxurious, wealthy and wretched man, excites universal attention.

His forgeries have been very numerous, and of such a daring nature, as to have been capable of full proof. On entering his prison, the Justice exclaimed, "You are the banker from Bernet's street, an't you?" "Yes, replied the prisoner, I am that unfortunate person, sir." "Oh, then, rejoined the magistrate, you had better look to your soul! look to your bible—read your bible!" On being informed by Mr. Conant, the examining magistrate, that he regretted the insult being offered, he replied, "I thank you: I was no otherwise insulted, than by the person's coming into my room, and addressing me without my consent, but, perhaps, I ought not to complain of any thing." His income from his banking concerns has been at least 15000 pounds a year; and yet the means he has fraudulently acquired are said to be little short of half a million.

A Cabinet Council is stated to have been held in Paris, at which the King presided, to take into consideration the following question, whether the treaty entered into between the United States and France, in 1822, providing that no additional duty should be imposed on the vessels of either nation, exceeding twenty francs per ton, should be preserved. This treaty was to continue until October last, and still longer, unless six months previous notice of an intention to abandon it was given by either party. Nothing of this kind has taken place, and our President in his message informs Congress that the treaty has since remained and still continues in force. But Mr. Monroe further informs congress, that, "At the time when that convention was concluded, many interesting subjects were left unsettled, and particularly our claim to indemnity for spoliations which were committed on our commerce in the late wars. For these interests and claims, it was in the contemplation of the parties to make provision at a subsequent day, by a more comprehensive and definitive treaty. The object has been duly attended to since, by the Executive, but as yet it has not been accomplished. It is hoped that a favorable opportunity will present itself for opening a negociation, which may embrace and arrange all existing differences, and every other concern, in which they have a common interest, upon the accession of the present King of France, an event which has occurred since the close of the last session of Congress."

PERU—A GALLANT AFFAIR.

The Baltimore Federal Gazette contains the translation of an interesting letter, dated off Callao, July 17, giving the particulars of a gallant exploit of the patriot blockading squadron, under Admiral Guise.

"The Admiral depatched Capt. Robertson, accompanied by Capt. Fleiman, and Lieut. Sulmann, of his vessel, with one hundred and twenty-five men, in nine boats, to take or destroy as many of the enemy's vessels as were in Callao. At his entrance he was opposed by more than one thousand soldiers and marines in the vessels, and fifteen hundred artillerists who manned the batteries of the Castles, and kept up a tremendous fire on our men. Notwithstanding this they effected the object of the enterprise by destroying and taking the following vessels:—The President of 20 guns—burnt; Joanna Gordon, flag-ship—taken; Perla, formerly of Chili—taken; a Brigantine, name unknown—taken; a large vessel, name unknown—burnt.

The Protector, the Congress and the Macedonian were employed in diverting the attention of the batteries, but almost all the fire of the latter were directed towards the brave men charged with the destruction of the vessels. When captain Robertson returned, we found he had three men killed and twelve wounded, one of whom since died. We had also one officer killed, named Thomas Williams, a Lieutenant of marines, and the clerk of the captain of the Congress, both mortally wounded."

Accounts from Brazil state, that after the capture of Pernambuco, some of the leaders of the insurrection were executed, and other distinguished citizens of the place were obliged to flee to avoid the same fate. The squadron of Lord Cochrane proceeded from Pernambuco to Maranham and Para, to reduce those places to the authority of the Emperor.

On the 4th ult. the President of Mexico published, by order, a decree of the Sovereign Congress, which authorised him to receive proposals for cutting open a communication between the two oceans by the isthmus of Tehuantepec, and for rendering navigable the rivers of Alvarado, Panuco, Bravo del Norte, Santiago, and Colorado, of the West. The proposals must be submitted within eight months from the 4th ult. The enterprise of thus uniting the Pacific and Atlantic is of the greatest importance.

FROM LA GUAYRA.—The fast sailing schooner Alicesanna, captain Southcomb, arrived at Baltimore from La Guayra, brings information, that a French brig of war had arrived at La Guayra, to demand satisfaction of the government for an insult offered one of the vessels of war of that nation. The Venezuela, (captain Chitty,) a Colombian corvette, while cruizing off Carthagena, fell in with the French brig of war Gazelle, bound to Martinique; and not liking her appearance, ordered the captain on board, with his papers, with which he complied without the least resistance, although of equal force; but on his arrival at Martinique he was broke and expelled the navy. A French fleet was expected at La Guayra, to inquire further into the business.—The markets at La Guayra were never known to be so glutted with American produce, owing to the numerous arrivals from the United States and St. Thomas. The supply of flour on hand was 4500 barrels. A gentleman who came home in the Alicesanna, states, that the authorities at La Guayra and Caraccas refused to give the satisfaction demanded by the captain of the French brig of war, and that he had sailed from La Guayra, declaring that he would bring a fleet to enforce the demand. The Columbian authorities alleged that captain Chitty had made a sufficient apology when he said to the captain of the "Gazelle"—"Now that I see who you are, I regret having subjected you to this inconvenience."

WEEKLY COMPENDIUM.

[Compiled for the Saturday Evening Post.]

Samuel P. Garrigues has been appointed, by the Mayor, High Constable, in the place of Wm. Haines, resigned.

On Monday, when the Mail Stages from New York for Philadelphia, had arrived within two miles of Frankford, the horses took fright at an elephant which was passing along the road, and upset the carriage. Six passengers who were within escaped without serious injury; but the carriage was so materially damaged, that the contractor was forced to take on the Mail in a dearborn.

The Powder Mill in Lee, Massachusetts, owned by Messrs. Merill and Hoyt, was blown up on Tuesday week, and three men were badly burnt. Loss of property not great.

At Mount Pleasant, West Chester, N. Y. on Sunday last, the wife of Mr. John Davids, was burnt to death by falling into the fire while she was in a state of intoxication.

We understand the Connecticut river is frozen over as far down as Middletown.

Commodore Rogers has resigned his situation in the Navy Board, and assumed the command of the line of battle ship North Carolina.

A medical school has been established at Washington, in connexion with the college called the Columbian, of which the Rev. Dr. Staughton is President. The medical professors are five in number.

General La Fayette has postponed his intended visit to the southern states until February or March next.

On the 14th ult. two young men, sons of Mr. Shower, of Franklin, Ohio, went into the woods to hunt deer. After some time, one of them being absent in the brush, the other seeing something move, thought it to be a deer; he fired, and on approaching the spot, found his brother a corpse.

Captain Bainbridge and Capt. Steward, of the Navy of the United States, are at present on a visit to the Seat of Government.

A letter from Cadiz, dated the 10th of October, states that Mr. Izuardi, who had been appointed Spanish minister to this country, died suddenly when he was about to set out from Madrid for Cadiz in order to embark on his mission.

The Quebec papers inform us that there are now twenty-one ships, mostly of a large class, building in the vicinity of that port, and that a twin ship to the celebrated Columbus, is building on the island of Orleans, a few miles below the city.

Mrs. DECATUR has presented to congress a memorial claiming compensation for property lost in the blowing up of the Philadelphia frigate at Tripoli.

The keeper of a hotel in Washington advertises that, at his Refectory, "the man of Massachusetts needs not hesitate to call for a pumpkin pie; the Virginian for his favourite bacon, nor the Pennsylvanian for his cauliflough."

In the case of Clarke vs. the Corporation of Washington, recently tried at Alexandria, and mentioned in our last paper, a new trial has been prayed, on the ground that the verdict of the Jury was directly opposite to the law, as laid down by the Court.

The Baltimore papers state that the Agent of the government of Mexico, has contracted with two shipwrights in that city for the building of two frigates.

The estimate of the appropriations necessary for every branch of the naval service, for the ensuing year, is two million, two hundred and ninety-eight thousand dollars.

The Notes of the Carlisle Bank are received on deposit at the Bank of the United States.

On the 9th inst. Mrs. J. Mair, of Niagara, died by suffocation, in consequence of placing a kettle of coals in her bed room.

Washington, December 22.—Gen. La Fayette, with his Son and Secretary, returned to this City yesterday afternoon, from his visit to Annapolis, escorted by Capt. Selby's troop of Anne Arundel cavalry, and accompanied by Messrs. Kent and Mitchell, of the House of Representatives of the United States, and by Col. Howard, of the Senate of Maryland, and Col. Chambers, of the House of Delegates of that state. The General was treated with the most marked respect and hospitality by the Legislature of Maryland, assembled at Annapolis, as well as by the inhabitants of that ancient metropolis, and he returns highly gratified with his visit. He spent last evening, by previous appointment, with the Mayor of the City and his lady, in company with a very numerous and brilliant assemblage of the officers of our Government, citizens, and strangers, including the French Legation, and other foreigners of distinction.

A rumor originated in a New York paper some days ago, and has had general circulation, that, after the expiration of his present term of public service, our venerable President, Mr. Monroe, intended to take up his residence in the city of New York. Not crediting the rumor, we did not copy it. The New York American, duly authorized, now assures the public that the rumor is without foundation, and that, "after the expiration of his present term, he will retire to his farm in Loudoun county, Virginia, about thirty miles from Washington, where, with the exception of occasional visits to his friends, he will spend the remainder of his days."

The Committees of New York and Philadelphia appointed by a meeting of Mechanics and Manufacturers of both places for the exhibition of domestic fabrics at Washington, have on consultation assigned the 20th day of February next for the commencement of this exhibition. They charge five per cent. on goods unsold, and seven and a half per cent. in case of a sale, commission and guarantee. It is not, however, the intention to make any speculation on the business; and when the accounts shall be closed these charges shall be rateably reduced, should they be found more than sufficient to defray expenses.

On the 21st ult. (Sabbath day,) two brothers, David and Jonas Coughonour, of Conemaugh township, Pa. went on a hunting excursion, taking different routes. David saw an object at a distance which he supposed to be a deer—he fired, and the fatal ball passed through his brother, who was dead when he arrived at the spot. But a few weeks previous, in the same township, a man was committed to prison, charged with shooting at one of Christian Horner's sons on the Sabbath day.

DARING ROBBERY.—On Saturday morning last, a ruffian entered the office of Mr. Casener, broker, in Chatham street, New York, and asked a lad, whom Mr. C. had left in his office while he stepped out on business, if a bank bill he then exhibited was counterfeit, and while the boy was examining the bill, threw sand in his eyes, then knocked him down with a club, and instantly seized a trunk, containing money to the amount of $14,000, and paper valued at $10,000 more, and immediately decamped. Police officers forthwith pursued him, and found the trunk empty at Coriser's Hook. By ten o'clock the lad, who was very badly wounded, so far came to, as to be able to describe the ruffian, and two persons were soon arrested, but neither was recognised by the boy as the perpetrator of the nefarious act.

A DREADFUL SITUATION.

Much sensibility is expressed as to the distressing and miserable situation in which the Governor of Kentucky is placed by the conduct of his son. He is committed to prison and, under violent presumptions, accused of MURDER in the first degree. On looking at the Constitution of Kentucky, we find that the Governor of that State is entrusted with the sole power, "to grant reprieves and pardons, except in cases of impeachment." How deplorable will be the situation of the father, if the Governor shall be called upon to sign the death warrant of his son. Without the public, powerful and pressing considerations which moved Brutus, Governor Desha is likely to be placed in nearly the same trying and heart-rending situation. He cannot now resign, because to resign would be to prejudge his son's guilt, by presuming his conviction, which is the only thing which can compel him to act upon the case. His situation is indeed heart-rending and most pitiable.

By a report of the auditor general of Pennsylvania, it appears that the receipts into the state treasury for the year ending on the 30th of November, 1824, with the balance on hand at the end of the previous financial year, amounted to 711,454 75 cents, and that the expenditures were 684,781 dollars 85 cents; leaving a balance in the treasury, on the first instant, of 26,582 dollars 89 cents. Of the receipts, the auction commissions and duties, amounted to 72,404 dollars 64 cents.

Just before Wellington, the murderer of Mr. Bonsall, was hung he delivered the following words with much firmness:—"I have heard it said that no Innocent Man was ever executed in this country, but it will lose its honor to day."—He then sang a Hymn and told the Sheriff he had nothing more to say. A full confession of his, is about to be published, detailing his crimes from the age of 15 to 41. Its authenticity is certified by the Sheriff of Delaware county, and other respectable gentlemen, who were present when [illegible] taken down. Wellington, in the most positive terms declared, that on the night of the murder he was not in company with either Lubbe or Bois; nor did he know where they were that night. He admitted that he gave Bois a ten dollar counterfeit Note which was proved to have been taken from Mr. Bonsall's on the night of the murder; that it was in his possession and that he forgot it on the road where he presumes and believes it was picked up by Bois. The day before Wellington was executed, a letter was addressed to him by Lubbe, who is now in Chesterfield, charged as one of the murderers of Mr. Bonsall, in which he, in the most earnest and solemn manner called upon Wellington, as he would shortly appear before the judgment seat of God, to declare the truth. In reply to this letter, Wellington explicitly declared that he knew nothing, but where Lubbe was on the night of the murder solemnly avers that he was not with him.

Congress seem disposed to adopt a similar course of conduct with regard to the Cherokee Indians and all the other Indian tribes under their jurisdiction—to allow them a tract of country to be purchased by the United States, and settled away from Indian emigrants. This is, perhaps, the only one of that can be taken to save this unhappy race of men from utter extirpation. If the Cherokees proceede to this measure, they will rest under the protection of the United States, and may hereafter realize what appears to be at present the great object of their ambition, to form an independent government of their own. They are advancing rapidly in cultivation, and they contemplate the day as approaching when their Republic shall be admitted as a distinct branch of our republican family. Their language possesses melody; reprobate the biasing character of the English dialect. They have translated many of the psalms into the Cherokee language, which they sing with much animation. Both humanity and literature, have been [illegible] attention to the improvement of the Indian race: we certainly owe [illegible] it becomes us to pay in other [illegible] extirpation.

Indian Robbery.—Mr. Wm. G[illegible] who arrived at St. Louis a short time since, from the part Antigny, states, that in descending the Des Moines River, his boat struck a rock, when he was compelled to unload a part of his freight consisting of lead which was piled up in the stream, with a U. S. flag flying over it showing the place, intending to send small boats from the foot of the Rapids after passing with the large one: that on returning (on the same evening) they discovered that both flag and lead had been stolen by a party of Sack Indians, then encamped near the place, and who no doubt saw the lead deposited.

NARROW ESCAPE.

On the 12th Sept. last, Mr. John Ellis of [illegible] cer, Pa. a celebrated hunter, being on a hunting expedition on Moose river, had a very remarkable and dangerous encounter with a Moose. While employed in taking muskrats from his traps, he heard a loud cracking of the brush on the opposite side of the river, which he supposed was caused by a carabou; seizing his gun he immediately entered his birch and proceeded to the spot where the noise was heard. On his approaching the animal [illegible] treated, and was followed by Mr. Ellis ten or fifteen rods, when it took to the river. He now discovered the animal to be a very large bull moose, and immediately returned to his canoe, which lay about fifty rods below where the moose entered the river, and started in pursuit of him. Having by great exertions approached within six or eight rods of him, he levelled his gun and fired, and the shot taking effect the moose made for the shore. Ascending a low pine bank he proceeded about fifty rods into an alder swail, tearing every thing before him as he went with his huge horns. Mr. Ellis remained in his canoe till the moose ceased from him. The moose was soon come up with, and rather unexpectedly, Mr. E. having approached within twenty or thirty feet of the enraged animal before he discovered him;—He instantly fired; but being somewhat agitated, by suddenly finding himself so near the moose and the threatening posture which he assumed, missed his object the ball entering a small tree which intervened between them; whereupon the moose immediately made him with desperate fury, taking him between his horns, one of which entered his clothes near the waistband of his pantaloons in front, and passed out near his chin and the other at the small of his back taking the skin in its course. While in this dangerous and critical situation, suspended eight or nine feet in the air, the moose made four or five bounds with him, clearing a rod or more at a leap, when his clothes giving away, he fell to the ground. The moose passed over him without striking him, and after going fifteen or twenty rods fell and expired. Mr. Ellis received considerable injury, but trifling to what might have been expected from the circumstances in which he was placed.

FAMILY OF GENERAL LA FAYETTE.

General La Fayette has one son and two daughters; the son, George Washington La Fayette, is now in this country; the daughters are madame Maubourg, and madame Lasteyrie.

Mrs. Maubourg has three daughters—Mrs. Brigode, Misses Louise and Jenny Maubourg.

Mrs. Lasteyrie has three daughters—named Paulina, Melanie and Octavia; and one son, named Jules.

George Washington La Fayette has three daughters, named Natolia, Matilda, and Clementina; and two sons named Oscar and Edmond.

Mrs. Brigode has two daughters, Georgiana and Gabriella.

These all reside at the hospitable mansion of La Grange, and we are informed, are dependent for their support on the limited income of that farm.

CONGRESS.

IN SENATE, December 21.

GRATITUDE TO LA FAYETTE.—The Senate, according to the order of the day, took up the bill making provision for General La Fayette; and no amendment being proposed thereto, the bill was read a third time, and the question put on its final passage, when the vote stood as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Barbour, Bouligny, Branch, Chandler, Clayton, Dickerson, Eaton, Jackson, Johnson of Ky. Johnston of Louis. Kelly, King of Alab. King of N. Y. Knight, Lanman, Lloyd of Mass. Lloyd of Md. Edwards, Elliott, Findlay, Gaillard, Hayne, Holmes of Maine, Holmes of Miss. Lowrie, M'Lean, Mills, Palmer, Parrott, Seymour, Smith, Talbot, Taylor, Thomas, Van Beuren, Van Dyke, Williams.

NAYS—Messrs. Barton, Bell, Brown, Cobb, Macon, Noble, Ruggels.

So the bill was passed, and sent to the House of Representatives for concurrence.

It may be necessary to state, that the provisions of the bill, as passed by the Senate, allows the General the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, and one entire township of land, to be chosen out of any of the public lands. The bill is in the following words:

A Bill making provision for General La Fayette.

Be it enacted, That the sum of two hundred thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby granted to Major General La Fayette, in compensation for his important services and expenditures during the American revolution, and that, for this purpose, a stock to that amount be issued in his favour, dated the 4th of July, 18[illegible] bearing an annual interest of six per cent. payable quarter yearly, and redeemable on the 31st of December, 1834.

Sect. 2. And be it further enacted, That a complete and entire township of land be, and the same is hereby granted to the said Ma[illegible]

...ral La Fayette, and that the President of ...nited States be authorized to cause the said ...ship to be located on any of the public ... which remain unsold, and that patents be ...d to General La Fayette for the same.

Green-Room Intelligence.

Our information from the westward does not ...afford us an opportunity of answering the queries ...of a correspondent respecting theatricals in that ...quarter. We shall keep an eye to his wishes, ...however; and whenever there are any particulars ...received that may be considered worthy of note, ...they shall be given with pleasure.

Mr. Cooper appeared at our theatre, for the ...first time this season, last evening, in the arduous ...and noble character of Virginius. To-night ...he takes the part of Selim, in the new piece of ...the Bride of Abydos. Major Stevens was well ...received in the tragedy of Tom Thumb, on Tues...day night. He is but 37 inches in height, yet he ...performed his part most manfully.

Mr. Conway is playing at Charleston with great ...success. He has performed Hamlet, Jaffier, Mac...beth and Marcus Brutus. The following just re...marks upon his style of performance are taken ...from the Southern Patriot. The stock company in ...that city appears to be highly respectable in point ...of talents:—"This gentleman in Jaffier has kept ...the promise which his Hamlet held out to us. He ...developes new beauties, and exhibits more striking ...excellencies as he proceeds. His nice discrimi...nation of the gradations of passion, his apparent ...identification of himself, in certain scenes, with the ...high minded but unfortunate Jaffier, evinced not ...only the highest proofs of mind, but an uncommon ...command of his physical powers. We have never ...witnessed finer specimens of intellectual acting, if ...we can so express ourselves, than Mr. Conway has ...treated us with in his two first performances. The ...imitative actor copies blemishes as well as beau...ties: the performer who does not merely mimic, ...but selects what is excellent in others and produ...ces new combinations of his own—is of course in...tellectual or inventive. This is we think remark...able, as the characteristic of Mr. Conway. Mind ...pervades his whole performance. The predomi...nant traits of character are never lost sight of, ...whether in bye-play, dialogue, or soliloquy, whilst ...the bursts of passion are tempered by the strictest ...judgment and chastity of manner. There were ...some scenes in his Jaffier that we never saw equal...led in Charleston. The impression on the house ...was powerful—was irresistible. We have, for our...selves, never witnessed the passions so marked ...and discriminated in representation—the transiti...ons from one class of emotions to a different class, ...so naturally preserved—the climax of feeling so ...gradually and powerfully wrought up, and the ...whole of Jaffier's character so developed and ...brought out. Mr. Conway's elocution, we think, ...the most perfect we have ever heard. His read...ing of Shakspeare, we should have before re...marked, is truly classical and elegant."

Evening Post.

PHILADELPHIA.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1824.

To Correspondents.

The poetical department of our next paper will be stored with a few of the choice effusions which we have been gathering on file; some of which, from their multiplicity, are likely to remain for a time longer. We should apologise for inattention to many pieces received, but in so doing we would only repeat, what is already known, that our columns are so well and abundantly stored with original poetry, we find it impossible to satisfy all the claims which are constantly pouring in upon us.

The next number of the Saturday Evening Post will commence a new series. The paper will then be enlarged to an imperial size, and will exhibit a specimen of the material for which we have regularly contracted, for the coming year. Having been furnished with a new set of types, and other improvements being contemplated, we shall, in the mechanical execution of our work, have nothing to fear from a comparison with the best printed daily papers in the city. From a knowledge of the support which we shall derive from the assistance of many friends and correspondents, independent of our own individual exertions, we flatter ourselves, the matter which shall be weekly laid before the public, will be such as to obtain for us an extension of the very liberal patronage already received. The primary object for enlarging the paper is, that it may continue to be sought after and read, for the variety of incident that it unfolds, and at the same time afford a vehicle for the dissemination of useful information in the shape of advertisements. There is no other print in this city that offers so many advantages to advertisers as ours—scarce three years have elapsed since its establishment, and we now circulate upwards of THREE THOUSAND papers, embracing in extent more particularly the surrounding country, as well as almost all parts of our union. The price of subscription will be continued at two dollars per year—payable in ADVANCE.

The December number of the Monthly Magazine made its appearance, rather unseasonably, the beginning of this week. We have not had leisure to peruse any part of it as yet; therefore, are not prepared to speak aught of its merits or demerits. Something was expected to have been said by the editor or publisher, regarding the alteration contemplated to take place in the work at the commencement of the new year; but, from the silence observed on the subject, we conclude our statement, made in a previous notice, to have been premature. The contents of the number are The Small Critics, Men and Manners, Provincial Literature, No. II, A Reverie, Prodigies Levamen, Mary Irvine, Family Pride, &c. Sketch of the celebrated Duchess of New Castle, Sacrament, Sabbath in the North of Ireland, Poor Jackson, Extraordinary instance of Maternal Presence of Mind, Remarks on the Moral Character of Lord Byron, Pride of Ancestry. There are four Poetical articles, comprising the Orphan Soldier's Tale, the Orphan Soldier's Song, Sonnet, Caithalure, and an Irish Historical Tale. The concluding pages are occupied with a Retrospect of Politics, by Dr. M'Henry.

The St. Cecelia Society gave a public practising on Thursday evening last, at the Musical Fund Society's Room. This room is in every respect suitable for the ordinary purposes for which it was designed, but the number who were anxious to gain admittance on the present occasion, far exceeded all previous calculation. At an early hour, every aperture within doors was completely occupied, and many who had feasted their imaginations, contemplating the treat which was preparing for them, were obliged to leave the place, without satisfying their strong and partial affections for the success of this first display of improvement which the Society have made. The science of music is gaining admirers. It is one which cannot fail to obtain a proper standing among the polite and fashionable acquirements of the present day. The zeal which is manifested by scientific professors, to cultivate a proper taste among our citizens, is truly commendable—its influence is great, and will prevail, notwithstanding the apathy which has been repeatedly shown towards exertions of the kind. The St. Cecelia Society is not of twelve months standing, and yet it consists of upwards of one hundred and thirty ladies and gentlemen members. It was organized in February last, a constitution adopted, and Mr. Neagle appointed president—and ever since has been progressing in a most flourishing manner. The price of admission is four dollars per annum, payable quarterly. Stated rehearsals are held every Wednesday evening, at the Musical Fund Hall. Leader of the instrumental music, Mr. Hansen. Vocal conductor, Thomas Carr, Esq.

Ladies or gentlemen wishing to become members, can make application to Col. A. M. Prevost, president, 45 Walnut street; Mr. Bacon, treasurer, 30 South Fourth street; or B. W. Clark, secretary, corner of Front and Market streets. The style and chaste execution of the principal pieces at this exhibition, was such as to elicit the warmest encomiums, and to give universal satisfaction. We understand, that it is contemplated by the Society to give a Concert shortly, and no doubt every exertion will be used to bring forth, in a masterly manner, the whole talents of the members.

POOR WILL'S POCKET ALMANAC FOR 1825, is published and advertised for sale by Kimber & Sharpless, No. 93 Market street. It contains a Tide Table; the usual Calendar; Solar and Lunar Eclipes for the year 1825; the times of holding the Yearly Meetings of the Religious Society of Friends; Banks in the City of Philadelphia, including the United States Bank, and the location of its Branches, with the Cashiers' names; Corporation of Philadelphia, Inspectors of the Prison; Guardians of the Poor; Managers of the Alms-House; Do. of the Pennsylvania Hospital; Rates of Postage; Government of the United States; Judges of the Supreme Court of Do.; Members of the 18th Congress, 2nd Session; Senators and House of Representatives; Pennsylvania Senate and House of Representatives; Federal Courts; Supreme, Circuit and District Courts of the U. States; Supreme Courts of Pennsylvania; Courts of Quarter Sessions of Common Pleas of the State of Pennsylvania; Courts of New Jersey; Census of the U. States for 1820; Roads, Post Towns, &c. throughout the United States, exhibited in 29 Tables, all selected with care from the last edition of Melish's Traveller's Directory, and other modern geographical works; most of the fashionable routes by steam-boats and stages, are described with as much minuteness as documents would admit. The Calendar is interleaved with post paper, making it a particularly useful companion for travellers, and all curious persons, who admire "Multum in Parvo." The public are invited to call, and possess themselves of this book, to many indispensable, as a valuable article for refrence. For our own part, we are confident it will meet with a liberal sale, as there is no one of the kind more deserving, or that offers a larger proportion of interesting matter, at the same reasonable price, (12½ cents.)

The bill which was brought forward in the Senate of the U. States, [see proceedings of the Senate in another part of our paper,] appropriating funds for the remuneration of General La Fayette, for his services and losses during the revolutionary war, has passed both houses of Congress. This is a congratulatory circumstance—particularly so, as the vote upon the question was nearly unanimous in both branches of the national legislature. The National Intelligencer gives us the fact in the following paragraph contained in that paper of Thursday.

"We have pleasure in announcing that the proposition for a grant of Two Hundred Thousand Dollars, and an entire township of land, (23,040 acres,) has received the sanction of both Houses of Congress. Each house has passed a bill of its own, but the joint sanction required to one or the other of them, after what has passed, may be considered a matter of course. The thing is done, and with an unanimity which has few examples in our legislative annals. It was desirable, doubtless, that the measure should have been adopted by a vote entirely unanimous, and without debate. But, if it had not been debated, and if there had not been conflicting opinions upon the matter, it would have been out of unison with the character of our government. The difference of opinion was one as to mode and quantity, and not as to principle. We have great satisfaction in stating that out of the dissentient voices, very few were opposed to the principle of the bill, and no one questioned or disparaged the merits of the eminent individual for whose benefit it is intended."

MARRIED,

On Wednesday, the 15th inst. in the thirty-fifth year of his age, PHILIP HORN.

On Saturday evening last, the 18th inst. in the 13th year of her age, ELLEN, daughter of Major John Ahrst, of an "enlargement of the heart." In the early death of this lovely and interesting child, a fond mother is called upon to mourn the loss of one whom she looked upon as her companion—an affectionate father one whom he justly considered an ornament to his family, possessing an amiable disposition, she was only to be seen and to be admired—mourn not! O! afflicted family—the "stern monster" came but to fulfil the "high mandates" of his master, and from the shades of woe, has borne her to that happy where the "wicked trouble not and the weary are at rest." Dry up your tears and mourn not as those "without hope," for

"Life is the leaf of being; the dim dawn;
The twilight of our day—Life's Vestibule,
As yet, is short, and Death!
And Death! Strong Death alone
Can heave the massy bar
This grim impediment of clay remove,
And make us embryos of existence free."

TOOTH-ACHE

Cured Instantaneously and without Pain, even where all the known applications have failed to afford relief.

S. MILFORD, Dentist, from London,

ASSURES those who may be disposed to try his remedy, that he will make a perfect cure, and enable the patient to chew with the teeth that were affected, even though the complaint had been aggravated by bad treatment. In less than forty-eight hours after the pain is cured, Mr. M. can plug the tooth with the greatest ease to the patient. Black and yellow teeth cleaned and brought to their original colour, and prevented from decaying, if it has commenced. He also separates and makes the teeth even, and takes away the decayed parts. Artificial Teeth neatly fixed and Stumps and Teeth extracted.

MILFORD'S TOOTH POWDER. This highly approved and valuable Powder, is excelled by none in use; it not only gives the Teeth an elegant polish but preserves and hardens the gums.—Price 25 cents.

Milford's ANODINE DROPS, for the cure of Tooth Ache—Price 50 cents. LOTIONS, for the cure of Scorbutic Gums, and to fasten the teeth, and restore the flesh when lost—Price 50 cents. These medicines are warranted efficacious and at the same time innocent; for sale by S. MILFORD, No. 253, South Fifth, near Spruce-street. may 15—1y

A CARD—To the Afflicted.

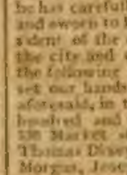
WE the undersigned, citizens of Philadelphia, do certify—that we have known Dr. Abraham Howell, as a practitioner of physic and surgery, for upwards of seventeen years, residing in and city, he has performed numerous extraordinary cures in the most complex cases. We also inform the afflicted that Dr. Howell has a large number of certificates of extraordinary cures, which he has performed of Wens, Cancers, Kings Evil, Callous Tumours, White Swellings, Mortifications, Old sores in the legs, Polypus, and Warts, which have all been cured without cutting, by medicine applied to the part affected. Also, certificates of extraordinary cures of Rheumatism, Gout, Dropsy, Scald Head, and Tetter. A large collection of Wens, and Cancers preserved which have received by the aforesaid certificates, and may be seen at his office, No. 2 North Eighth street. The above-said certificates have been proved before Robert Wharton, the Mayor of the city, and other Magistrates, and recorded in two large sheets of parchment, by John Adams, clerk of the Board of Health, for the city and port of Philadelphia, which he has carefully compared with the original certificates, and sworn to before Joseph Hemphill, Esq. who is President of the district court of common pleas in and for the city and county of Philadelphia, as will appear by the following: In testimony whereof we have hereunto set our hands, this 24th day of April, at Philadelphia aforesaid, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirteen. Signed Wm. B. Johnson, No. 138 Market street, John Fees, No. 22 Arch street, Thomas Drury, George Shed, William Marley, William Morgan, Joseph Young, John Baldwin, Barry Bales.



In the name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Simon Snyder, Governor of the Commonwealth to all to whom these presents shall come, sends greeting:

Know ye, that Joseph Hemphill, Esq. whose name is subscribed to the certificate hereunto annexed, was at the time of subscribing the same and now is president of the district court of common pleas in and for the city and county of Philadelphia, the said commonwealth duly appointed and commissioned, and full faith and credit is and ought to be given to his official acts accordingly. Given under my hand, and the great seal of the state, at Lancaster, this fifth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eleven.

By the Governor, S. B. BOILEAU, Secty of State.

CHARLES STEVENSON, Goldsmith and Jeweller, No. 112 South Second street, opposite the Custom House.

Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavour.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

THREE HEADS.—A TRUE STORY.

'Twas Christmas eve, a jovial set
Of country blades, at Tavern met,
To hail the coming day:
The fire, with ample fuel stor'd,
Up the capacious chimney roar'd,
While seated round the festive board,
They laugh'd the hours away.
The cheerful song and jest prevail,
And each in turn repeats his tale:
What dancing fairies, clad in green,
Ghosts, and Hobgoblins, he had seen,
And Jack with lanthern, burning bright,
Whose ever wand'ring magic light,
O'er bog and ditch, the travelling wight
Would lead astray.

And now a vet'ran captain bold,
Of times long past his story told,
And if his tale were true:
What Cæsar, or what Bonaparte
Had e'er perform'd, in war's vast art,
The boasting Captain knew.
He cock'd his hat and pois'd his cane,
And fought the battles o'er again,
Of York town heights, and Monmouth plain,
With great applause;
And boasted he had fought and bled,
With brave Fayette, who "burn'd to shed"
"His blood in Freedom's cause."

'Tis said, "the crowing cock won't fight,"
At least so thought a waggish wight,
Who strove with cutting jeer and joke,
The Captain's choler to provoke,
And strongly urged he'd stay all night,
Lest on his road, some wandering sprite,
Some sheeted ghost or goblin grim,
(In shape of post or spreading limb)
With open jaws should swallow him.

The Captain ill could brook the jest,
His kindling eye, his rage expresst,
And wrong his passion grew;
His cudgel o'er his head he shook,
And loudly swore, with furious look
He valued neither ghost, nor spook,
Nor Devil blue:
A stranger he to dastard fear,
Should host of damned fiends appear
"He'd charge them thro' and thro'.

'Twas now the witching hour of night,
When howling fiend, and goblin sprite,
And grinning ghost, all clothed in white,
On earth appear;
Where blue light brimstone vapours glide,
The ghastly hag, mounted astride
The awful broomstick, swift doth ride
Upon the midnight air.

Homeward the gallant Captain strode
With sluggish pace, in musing mood,
With down cast eyes;
When at the entrance of a wood,
A dreadful form before him stood
Of monstrous size—
Three heads his ample shoulders bore,
And sudden with tremendous roar,
He made the wood resound,
And frighten'd Echo o'er and o'er,
Return'd the awful sound.

Stunn'd at the sight, with sudden dread,
The Captain's boasted courage fled,
His hair stood bristling on his head,
With wild alarm;
What horror seized him, when he saw
The ghastly spectre coolly draw,
Two of his heads "en chapeau bras"
Beneath his arm—

Like arrow from the bended bow,
The vet'ran soldier swiftly flew,
As swiftly did the fiend pursue
In eager chase;
Until the Captain's gate appear'd,
Which—with desperate bound, he clear'd;
When, lo! the spectre disappear'd,
And lost the race.

Now Fame her sounding trumpet blew,
And far and wide, the story flew;
And all the neighbours far and near,
The Captain 's wond'rous tale to hear,
Would gather round;
While he, with boasting air would tell
How he had maul'd the fiend from hell,
And fore'd him, with tremendous yell,
To leave the ground.

The children listen'd with affright,
No, noisy urchin after night,
Durst show his face;
The trembling schoolboy changed his route,
And daily walk'd a mile about
To shun the haunted place—

At length the mischief loving blade
Of whom, we former mention made,
The Captain's lying tongue betray'd,
And let the secret out;
He slyly said, with knowing air,
He thought one head enough to wear,
With t'other two he would prepare
A mess of sour krout.

An opening clue was thus obtain'd,
The mystery was soon explain'd,
And far the story spread;
And when the Captain passes by,
With one accord the urchins cry,
There goes the Cabbage Head. D.

We have several times been requested by our fair friends to publish an accurate statement of the various fortunes dependent on the number of seeds contained in fruit, and through the politeness of a lady we are enabled to furnish the following, which she assures us may be relied on, as absolutely correct.

1. I Love—2. I Love—3. I Love I say,
4. I Love with all my heart—5. I cast away.
6. He Loves—7. She Loves—8. Mutual,
9. Quarrel—10. Reconciliation—11. Courtship—
12. Marriage.

An Irish tailor made a gentleman's coat and waistcoat too small, and had orders to take them home and let them out. Some days after, the gentleman enquiring for his garment, was told by the tailor, that the coat and waistcoat happening to fit a countryman, he had LET THEM OUT at eighteen-pence a week.

During the reign of Cromwell, a clergyman during his services, took occasion to pray, "that the King and Parliament might hang together in peace and concord." A sailor present jumped up, and exclaimed, "that's right; only hang them! I don't care by what cord it is."

The Welsh Rabbit.—A gentleman arriving late one evening at the George Inn, in the county town not many miles from the Land's End, England, called for a Welsh Rabbit; after waiting a considerable time, he rung the bell to inquire if it was ready. "Sir," said the servant maid, "my master has been all over town, and cannot get a Welsh rabbit for love or money!" "Oh! very well," replied he, laughing; "Then let him get a couple of eggs, and, d'ye hear, boil them soft"—Again his patience was tried, and again he rung the bell. "Are my eggs ready," said he: "Sir, answered the girl, with a low courtsey, they have been boiling this half hour, and are now just as hard as when I put them in; they will not boil soft."

Holmes' Pulmonary Specific,
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS.

An Appeal to the public on the necessity of guarding against that much neglected Complaint generally termed a Common Cold and Cough, and of applying a safe and timely Remedy.

IF we take a cursory view of the amazing number of diseases with which the inhabitants of the world are afflicted, and the almost innumerable remedies perpetually advertised for each, we should be apt to imagine that it is scarcely possible for any human being to enjoy uninterrupted health for the short period of a single month by any effort of prudence or discretion which it may be in his power to exert: but if we minutely examine into the nature and causes of these apparently distinct and separate complaints, here we must be surprised to find that a common cold has been the despised and neglected parent of by far the greatest proportion. This being the fact, and which is well known to men of science and experience, into what narrow limits might not the application of medicine be confined, could we but be persuaded to pay some attention to ourselves on the first approach of those symptoms which clearly indicate that we have caught cold: but we are too often deceived into an opinion, that while they are slight, there can be little or no occasion for medicine, which, for the most part, is generally loathsome and disagreeable, and which too few are prevailed upon to take while free from pain, or conceive themselves in no danger. A little reflection, however, upon the serious consequences that may happen from neglect, may lead to the adoption of the pleasant preparation now offered, which will be found both incorrect and effectious if taken according to the directions.

For sale at THATCHER & THOMPSON'S, N. W. corner of Market and Second Streets, and at No. 28 LOMBARD STREET.—Price, 37 1-2 cents per bottle.

A New Song, to an Old Tune.

Few months have flown since I was poor,
And sorrows then were mine;
When passing through the market place
I saw John Gibbs's sign:
I quickly pass'd, 'twas well I did,
For I was just in time
To buy a Ticket, see the Bird,
And hear the Clock's sweet chime.
Chorus—For John Gibbs, he is the man,
At selling prizes high.
Then haste all you who cash can spare,
Be quick—a Ticket buy.

My numbers drew the highest prize,
I do not now repine,
For I have cash to serve a friend
And take my glass of wine;
Then call on GIBBS, he has the cash,
And Hope there smiles divine,
Whilst Justice welcomes old and young,
Who visit Fortune's shrine.
Chorus—For John Gibbs, he is the man,
At selling prizes high,
Then haste all you who cash can spare,
Be quick—a Ticket buy.

If you can't buy a whole one, try a half, a quarter, or an eighth—it may make but cannot break you. The following brilliant Lottery will be drawn on the 5th of January ensuing, all in 5 minutes; and the lucky holder of the fifty thousand need not call a second time for the cash. Gibbs is always at home.

SWAIM'S PANACEA.

This valuable Medicine has obtained a distinction which its effects alone can support. As a purifier of the blood it has no rival. It is the most useful spring and summer alterative ever known. All those who are affected with Scrofula, Leprosy, Scurvy, or cutaneous Eruptions, or of those outwardly diseases arising from impurity of blood and juices—also, those who suffer by diseased Rheumatic affections, or from indigestion of the stomach, or those whose constitutions are broken down by mercury, antimonial, or empirical medicines, should submit to a course of Swaim's Panacea. The effect of this Medicine is such as not to interrupt either business or pleasure, and requires only the common restraints of moderation in diet. It is known by the circulating fluids, and corrects their tendency to all those diseases which originate in vitiated blood. It is for sale, though a powerful substitute for mercury, and removes those evils which an unsuccessful use of that mineral often occasions, &c.

CERTIFICATES.

"I have repeatedly used Swaim's Panacea, both in Hospital and in private practice, and have found it to be a valuable medicine in chronic, syphilitic, and scrofulous complaints, and in obstinate cutaneous affections.

"VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.

"Professor of Surgery in the University of New York, Surgeon of the N. Y. Hospital, &c.

"New York, 1st mo. 5th, 1824."

"I have, within the last two years had an opportunity of seeing several cases of very inveterate ulcers, which having resisted previously the regular modes of treatment were healed by the use of Mr. Swaim's Panacea; and I believe, from what I have seen, that it will prove a very important remedy in scrofulous, venereal and mercurial cases.

"N. CHAPMAN, M. D.

"Professor of the Institutes and practice of Physic, University of Pennsylvania, &c."

"Philadelphia, February 16, 1823."

"I have applied the Panacea of Mr. Swaim in many instances, within the last three years, and have found it extremely efficacious, especially in cases of syphilis and in mercurial disease. I have no hesitation in pronouncing it a medicine of inestimable value.

"W. GIBSON M. D.

"Professor of surgery in the University of Pennsylvania, Surgeon and Clinical Lecturer to the Alms House Infirmary, &c.

CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.

The great demand and wonderful success of this medicine, has induced a number of persons to imitate it in various ways. Some are selling Sarsaparilla and other syrups, imposing them on the ignorant for the Panacea; others mixing the genuine medicine with molasses, &c. and three bottles out of one—thus retaining some of its virtues. These imitations and adulterations have, in many instances, protracted the sufferings of patients, in cases where the genuine medicine would have proved instantly efficacious. I therefore deem it a duty I owe the public, to acquaint them, that it is impossible, from the very nature of its ingredients, to be discovered by chemical analysis; and, consequently, that all other mixtures represented to be it, and sold as such, are fraudulent and base impositions, calculated to deceive the ignorant and unwary. The genuine medicine has my signature on a label, representing Hercules and the Hydra, and my name on the seal.

Price $3 per bottle, or $30 per dozen.

Communications, post paid, and orders from any part of the world, will receive immediate attention.

LATE additions to the Menagerie—14 Living Animals among which are TIPPOO SULTAN, the great Indian Elephant of Ceylon, weighing upwards of 7000 pounds, The MAMMOTH LION, [illegible] the largest and most beautiful animal of the species, ever imported into America.—A LAMA, from Peru, an animal of wonderful speed.—A SHETLAND PONEY, a very diminutive and ingenious Animal, &c. &c.

TIPPOO SULTAN was imported into this country about three years ago, and was formerly one of the most ferocious and untractable of the species. He was broke by Mr. Mann, his keeper, and would never be governed by any other person. The sagacity of this animal, together with the docility and dexterity of his keeper, produce a spectacle, not only curious and diverting, but in some instances horrible to the spectator and dangerous to the keeper. Among a variety of singular marks of sagacity, he takes a stand in the centre of
